Arnold Bizer, brother of the groom, of Elmhurst College, was the soloist and sang The Lord's Prayer preceding the ceremony and "O Perfect Love" during the rituals.

To the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, the bride came down the aisle on the arm of her father, Rev. Paul Niedermeyer. Palms, ferns and white flowers and white candles provided a background for the double ring ceremony which was performed by Rev. Paul Niedermeyer and Rev. Eric Bizer, the fathers of the bride and groom.

The groom chose as his best man, his brother Robert Bizer of Eden Theological Seminary. Ushers were Pfc. Edw. Niedermeyer, brother of the bride, of St. Louis and Phillip Fischer and Herbert Hildebrandt of Eden Theological Seminary.

Husband of Former Mokena Resident Meets Tragic Death

In a letter from Mrs. F. Bosold of Belleville, Ill., who is the widow of a former pastor of St. John Evangelical church in Mokena, she told of the death of Dr. Leonard Lundgren, husband of her youngest daughter Esther, who will be well remembered in Mokena.

Dr. Lundgren, who was 61 years old, was swimming in the ocean, at San Francisco, Sat. June 16 with his three children; Leonard Jr., 11, Lorraine 9 and Beatrice 8. Dr. Lundgren collapsed and died in the ocean as he went to rescue his son who was floundering in water over his head.

The son was rescued by three soldiers who also brought the father's dead body to land. Coast Guard members gave artificial respiration to Dr. Lundgren for forty-five minutes before giving him up as dead.

At the emergency hospital, the boy was treated and pronounced fully recovered. The father died of a heart attack, for there was no water in his lungs.

Funeral services, which were held Monday, June 18, were private and were attended by his widow, and 3 children; the soldiers; members of the Board of Education and teachers of the Mission High School at San Francisco; and also by a close friend of Mrs. Lundgren.

As Dr. Lundgren was a Captain in World War one, the services were military, six soldiers being pallbearers; a Chaplain officiating; a squad of soldiers firing three volleys and a bugler played taps. The casket was covered with a flag. Interment was in the new Military Golden Gate cemetery where the privilege is extended to the widow to be buried in the same grave, at the time of her death.

Mokena Board Holds Up Awarding of Contract

When the Mokena village board considered the lowest bid submitted Tuesday night for the construction of a storm water sewer on the south side of the village, it was discovered that the engineer's estimate of $6,000 for the completion of the project was $1500 below the lowest bid. So far about $6,000 has been collected or pledged and in order to go thru with the job an additional $1500 must be raised. The board held the matter over for another week in order to see if the needed $1500 additional can be raised. A special meeting of the board will be held next Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m. at the village hall at which time the fate of the project will be decided. If enough additional money can be raised, then the job will be completed if not then it would have to be dropped.

Five bids were submitted ranging from $7133.32 to $10,523.40. Four bids were entirely on glazed tile and one bid was for either glazed or concrete tile, but the consensus of opinion was that glazed tile would prove the most satisfactory.

Bids submitted were as follows: D. L. Amici Co., Melrose Park, Ill. $10,523.40; H & L Motor Service, Midlothian, Ill. $9,484.60; C. A. Bettenhausen, Tinley Park $7,133.32; Angelo Dwigl, Berwyn, Ill. $8,276.40; Doctor and Davidson, Orland Park, $7,175.00.

Mr. Bettenhausen's bid was the lowest on a per unit price, ranging from $2.19 per foot for the laying of approximately 3,000 feet of 18 in. glazed tile and $1.94 per foot for concrete tile. In addition to the drain tile, catch basins must be built and 100 feet of re-inforced concrete tile must be laid under Wolf Road.

The project in question is being handled on a purely voluntary basis from the property owners being benefited by the project.

STANGER BROS. RELEASED ON PROBATION

Wm. and Louis Stanger, formerly of Mokena, who have been in the county jail since March 26 were released Tuesday and began their two years probation period. Early this year they pleaded guilty to a manslaughter count of an indictment returned against them by the September grand jury in connection with the death of Luther Scott, of Mokena, father in law of their sister Elaine. They were charged with fatally beating Scott in a fight during a family quarrel on June 16 of last year as a result of which Scott died in Silver Cross hospital a week later. After pleading guilty the court allowed them probation, but provided that they were to serve a six months jail sentence first. The 72 days they served in jail prior to being admitted to bail was deducted from the sentence. The Stangers are to report to the probation officer at regular intervals.

The $500 bond under which each has been placed was approved in circuit court last week by Judge James V. Bartley.

Another stipulation was that the two brothers are to leave and stay out of Will County.

Thunderhead

MARY O'HARA
W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Thunderhead, commonly known as the Goblin, is the only white horse ever born on the Goose Bar ranch in Wyoming. He grows from a misshapen colt to a powerful yearling, resembling his great grandsire more every day. The grandsire is a wild stallion called the Albino. One day Goblin wanders into a mountain valley, meets the Albino, and barely escapes with his life. After his wounds heal, his 12-year-old owner, Ken McLaughlin, begins to train him. The McLaughlins secretly hope he will develop into a racer. The Goblin is difficult to handle, but one day he surrenders to Ken, and sets off across the prairies. He runs with astonishing ease, speed and endurance.

CHAPTER XIII

As she approached him, everything forgotten but the longing for closeness and understanding, he looked up at her. Her iris-colored eyes were dark with emotion. They were shadowed underneath, but they were full of gentleness and affection and her smile pleaded for reconciliation. Rob held out his hand to her. She leaned over to kiss him and he kissed her in return. Their eyes did not quite meet.

"Are you going up?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Don't wait for me. I'm going to read awhile."

The "track" was a half mile oval on the level range north of Lone Tree Creek, about two miles from the ranch house.

This had been selected by the boys immediately upon their arrival home from school this summer as Thunderhead's practice and trial ground. There was a natural grandstand to one side, a peak of craggy rock spearing up. They had outlined the oval track by setting posts at the curves. These posts—Thunderhead must understand—he was to run outside of, not in. Sometimes he did, sometimes he did not. Not that he did not understand! They had painted a broad band of white across the course at the finish, just in front of the grandstand and here Thunderhead had run many a mile, wondering, no doubt, where was the sense in it. Running to shelter in a storm—running away from enemies and dangerous places—just even running with his own band for fun and exercise on the Saddle Back—this could be understood. But running on the flat range, often at top speed, around and around those posts, with a small demon yelling on top of him and another jumping up and down on the rock—this was incomprehensible.

The air was fresh after the storm, the range green and dustless. Nell was in white linen jodhpurs and white silk shirt with the sleeves rolled up on her slender brown arms. Her face was without care or worry, like a child's when a picnic is ahead. She sat beside Sargent in his car, pointing out to him the way to the track, for it could not be reached by any of the roads on the ranch.

In the back of the car was Howard with the bucket of oats. Just before they had started they had heard a yell, and Ken came running with a bucket half full of oats and a halter rope. His face showed embarrassment as he apologized for Thunderhead and stuck the bucket in the car. "Just in case—in case he got away or something—and I had trouble in getting him back."

"So," said Sargent, as they drove along, "he gets away, does he? And is hard to get back?"

"Aw—" said Howard, "he's pretty good. We haven't been training him very long, you know."

"Sometimes," said Nell, "he runs clear off and doesn't come back for a long time. Look, Charley—you go down this slope here and through Lone Tree—that shallow place there." Charley slowed down to put the car through the creek.

"Where does the colt go?" he asked.

"That's what we'd all like to know," said Nell.

"He came back once with cuts and scratches," said Howard, leaning over the back of their seat. "And a terrible big wound in the chest. Dad said a stallion had pawed him."

Charley Sargent seemed to have been struck dumb. He stood looking at the horses, first Thunderhead, then the filly, Touch And Go. She had moved away a little and was grazing quietly. Finally he reached for the makings, rolled himself a cigarette and took a long puff.

"Ken," he said quietly, "I'll be damned."

Ken, at the colt's head, looked at him anxiously, the color coming and going in his face.

"So that!" said Sargent in his drawing voice, "is Thunderhead out of Flicka by Appalachian!"

"Yes, sir, he's by Appalachian all right."

"How old is he?"

"Just a short two. Do you—do you think he looks pretty good, Mr. Sargent?"

"He's nothing of a racer—"

"He isn't!"

"Nothing like any horse I ever saw before. He's like a statue of a horse that sculptors think up—all big curves and muscles—that head—"

Thunderhead's face, eyes, head—these were, indeed, the outstanding things about him. Such a face would make a person suddenly stop in passing, look again—then stand hypnotized. The intensity of the black eye with the thin thread of white around it—the wildness, the implacable determination—the higness of the head—the way the heavy neck curved and drew the chin in to the chest—then suddenly flung the head high—with the black muzzle reaching up—the nostrils flaring—

"I'll be damned," said Sargent weakly again.

"Isn't he a racer at all, Mr. Sargent?"

"He's not a racing type. Not a runner. Not that he might not, perhaps—beat a racer—! With that power, no telling what he could do! Is he fast?"

"Well—sometimes, if he wants to be. He really can run, but he doesn't always do it."

"You don't think he's too heavy, Charley?" Nell asked. "Not like a work horse?"

"My Gosh, no! Those legs—they're strong but they're trim and clean. He's a heavy hunter type. All the power in the world there."

At every word waves of hot and cold went through Ken. Praise of Thunderhead! Power? Ken knew his power. Would he ever forget the first ride he had had on him this summer? It was not just the ride. It was an experience of power and will that had been communicated from the horse's body to his own and had left a mark in his consciousness that would never be erased.

He smoothed Thunderhead's nose softly. "He's strong all right."

The stallion's eyes turned a little, fastened on Ken. Ken stared back. Suddenly Thunderhead's teeth bared and reached for Ken's arm. Ken snatched it away and cuffed him. Thunderhead reared, came down prancing. Ken hauled on the reins and shouted at him. Charley stepped back quickly.

"Risling!" Charlie laughed and looked at Thunderhead.

"Nasty-tempered, eh?"

"It isn't that. He doesn't like me."

"Doesn't like you! That's pretty tough, when he's yours and you have to train him."

"I keep thinking maybe he'll get to like me. Mother's the only one he likes. He's never mean to her."

"Let's look at the filly. Why did you bring her along?" asked Charley.

"He's very fond of her. She's his little sister. She's kind of a mascot for him."

"Oh, she's out of Flicka too?"

"Yes. And they always stay together. It kind of quiets him, if he should get excited, to have her around."

"He gets excited, does he? And mean?"

Ken was shocked. "Oh, never mean! But he bucks and fights. Sometimes he runs away with me."

"But never mean!" laughed Sargent. "I see. But can't you hold him in?"

"He takes the bit. He's better when Touch And Go's around. He's happier. You see he isn't a very happy horse most of the time. He's got something eating him, dad says."

Sargent was studying the filly. "That's a nifty little filly."

"She's exactly like Flicka was when she was a yearling. When I first got Flicka, she was just about that age and a bright golden sorrel like that, and the light mane and tail."

"She's like her sire," said Sargent. "She's by Banner, isn't she?"

"Yes, and she's very light and fast."

"You don't say," Sargent was not going to be enthusiastic about a colt of Banner's when one of Appalachian's was around.

"Yes, she can go like the wind! But of course nobody has ever ridden her. She just runs along with Thunderhead when we train him, or by herself."

"Mr. Sargent," said Howard, "our two-year-olds are going to be gelded right away and dad says Thunderhead's got to be gelded too. Do you think he ought to be?"

At this unpleasant reminder of the one thing that was preying on his mind, the happiness went out of the day for Ken.

Nell's cheeks colored with anger and she turned away and walked over to the "grandstand." "Come along, Howard, give me a hand up here! We'd better get started!"

Sargent looked at Ken's white, sullen face.

"What's the matter, son?"

Ken gave a little jerk of his head toward Howard. "What he was saying there. Dad's going to have all the two-year-olds gelded."

"When?"

"Some time this week. He's sent word to Doc Hicks to come and do it whenever he's in this neighborhood. Then dad won't have to pay for his driving out and back just for our horses."

"Is he going to geld Thunderhead too?"

"Yep."

"Well, what if he does? He won't be the only one. They all have to be gelded, you know."

"But he's going to be a race horse!"

"What's that got to do with it? Race horses get gelded too—most of them. It won't hurt him. And it may improve his appearance. I wouldn't like to see that neck of his get any thicker."

"But he might die!"

"Oh, nonsense! It won't hurt him. But maybe, if he runs well enough, we could get your father to change his mind."

Ken shook his head. "He never changes his mind."

"Never does?"

"No."

"Well, anyway, let's see what the colt can do now. Up with you." He clutched the seat of Ken's pants, and the boy went lightly up into the saddle. He hitched his feet into the little short stirrups and grinned down at Sargent. "I don't usually ride with these short stirrups. I ride bareback a lot. It's kind of hard to get used to. But I can do it."

He squeezed his knees together, and bent over the horse's withers like a jockey.

Sargent's long brown face was twinkling with enjoyment. "Give him a bit of a workout first to warm him up. Remember, I've an interest in this colt too!"

This was very cheering to Ken as he gave the signal to Thunderhead and the colt started forward. Perhaps, if Mr. Sargent had an interest in him too, he might say something to his father about the gelding. Sargent stood looking at him as he cantered down the course, noticing his action. Then he climbed up on the grandstand beside Nell and Howard. There was a ledge quite high up from which they could overlook the whole track.

Howard held the stop watch in his hand.

Touch And Go left her grazing and cantered playfully beside her big brother, down to the end, around the curve, and back again. The white colt moved slowly and easily.

After ten minutes or so, Sargent shouted to Ken, "Get him going now, son—Let him out."

Ken swung around to the starting line and flung the horse over it in a gallop.

For a half-hour then, Ken struggled to make the colt give a good account of himself. He had very little success. Thunderhead cut a corner once, Ken pulled him up, made him go back and outside the post. Suddenly the colt got ugly—fought for the bit—Ken spurred him and reined him back, then lifted him forward into a run. Touch And Go ran with him.

By turns Howard and Charley Sargent held the stop watch. Finally they climbed down and Ken rode up to them. His face was flaming, his eyes wild, the horse nervous and pacing.

"Can he run, Ken?" said Sargent. "What have you been giving me?"

"Oh, yes, he can—if he wants!" answered Ken passionately.

"I'm beginning to think he's too much horse for you," said Sargent.

"You know," said Nell thoughtfully, "he really can run. It's quite different from this hard galloping. It's a different gait. Do you remember that black mare—Rocket—his grandmother?"

"I sure do—she was almost my mare."

"Yes. That one. You remember the time we ran her in front of the automobile and clocked her—and she just floated along without trying—no effort at all?"

"I do. Never saw such a gait in my life."

"He's got the same gait. He does it sometimes. I wish you could see it. Ken, let's try again. I'll tie up Touch And Go. I think she distracts him."

Nell got the tie-rope, snapped it to the filly's halter and fastened her to the bumper of the automobile so that Thunderhead could not see her. Once more they took their places on the ledge and Charley gave Ken the signal.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

DREW PEARSON

NEW WHITE HOUSE TEMPO

Harry Truman has now been President of the United States for a little over two months—two of the most historic months in the nation's history. These two months are sufficient to get a fairly accurate gauge of how the new President will function for the rest of his term.

On the surface there is a new atmosphere in the White House when you walk into it these days. If, for instance, you drop in on White House Secretary Charlie Ross, he is cordial, courteous, but brief. There is no invitation or inclination to sit down and gossip. This business-like atmosphere prevails throughout the entire White House staff.

If you go on in to see Ross's boss, you get in on time. There are few waits. And the little man on the other side of the big, broad, shiny desk listens intently. He wants to hear what his visitors have to say. These are two definite innovations.

Truman gives the impression of having a firm grasp on all domestic problems. He knows them thoroughly—undoubtedly better than Franklin Roosevelt during his latter years, when he was devoting all his time to the war.

One of Truman's frequent replies to callers when they urge sanction on some special idea is:

"I realize that. But it takes time to do all these things, and seldom have so many important things confronted us all at one time. I'll get around to that just as soon as I can."

One thing that worries him most is our foreign affairs. The new President frankly realizes it is his main weakness. He does not have Roosevelt's international background, therefore has to rely almost wholly on his diplomats.

Truman's method of running the government is that of picking good men and giving them free rein. This is a good system, and we could have had more of it in the past. But it breaks down when the President is not sure he can rely on the men picked to perform the most important job we now face—building up the peace after the war. Truman told Stettinius, for instance, that he was to be his own boss at San Francisco. But he found that Stettinius called him on the phone once or twice a day to get his approval of almost every decision.

Unlike Roosevelt, Truman does not hesitate to fire a man who doesn't produce. He let Leonard Reinsch go back to his radio job in Atlanta the day after he handled himself badly in a press conference. He transferred Edward D. McKim, his administrative assistant, after it became known that the genial and likeable McKim seemed too engrossed in Mrs. "Hope Diamond" McLean's dinner parties and the social whirl of Washington.

MacARTHUR ONCE FIRED EISENHOWER

Sometimes it is from quirks of fate or personal jealousies that heroes are born.

Old army friends of General Eisenhower couldn't help but remember this as they gathered to pay him tribute.

For, it had not been for a personal row with General MacArthur in the Philippines, Eisenhower probably would be in a Jap prison camp today instead of receiving the plaudits of millions.

When MacArthur retired as chief of staff and began the reorganization of the new Philippine army, he took with him to Manila one of the bright, up-and-coming men of the army, Col. Dwight Eisenhower. But, after some time in the Philippines, things didn't go well, and MacArthur fired him. Eisenhower went back to the U.S.A. to climb to fame and the top command of the American army.

If he had remained with MacArthur, he probably would now be with Gen. "Skinny" Wainwright and the 16 other American generals taken prisoner by the Japs.

BASEBALL AND UNITED NATIONS

In San Francisco, a delegation of Philadelphians called on Australia's External Affairs Minister Herbert Evatt to ask that the city of brotherly love founded by William Penn become the seat of the United Nations in the future.

Dr. Evatt listened carefully. Then he replied:

"I can't vote for Philadelphia until the Phillies get out of the cellar. I'm afraid it would give the United Nations a defeatist attitude if both Philadelphia baseball teams were at the bottom of their leagues."

CAPITAL CHAFF

New Hampshire's one-time isolationist Senator Tobey has got religion. He is so anxious to avoid another war that he has become one of the most ardent advocates of international co-operation. Tobey even blasted (indirectly) his old friend and colleague, ex-Senator Danaher of Connecticut, who, while an executive of the Republican national committee, used his position as ex-senator to go on the senate floor and lobby against the reciprocal trade agreements act.

MAN'S FAILURES AND GOD'S PROMISES

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 6:5-7; 8:1, 4, 18, 20-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease.—Genesis 8:22.

The beginnings of all things in the book of Genesis include, we are sorry to note, the beginning of sin in the fall of Adam. Soon we read of the first murder, Cain slaying his godly brother, Abel, because his acceptance with God exposed the wrong heart-attitude of Cain.

The godly line was renewed in Seth, but before long sin again lifted its ugly head. Now the wickedness of man had become so widespread that God was driven to a drastic judgment.

I. Judgment for the Wicked (6:5-7).

The Lord sees the wickedness of men—let us not forget that! At times it seems as though the ungodly flourish in their sin and that there is no judgment upon them.

God knows what goes on in the world. He is long-suffering and merciful, but there is a boundary line to His patience, and when that limit is reached, there can be nothing but judgment.

Ever imagination of the thoughts of man's heart was evil continually (v. 5). One is reminded of Jeremiah 17:9, and of such a contemporary estimate of man as that of Dr. Mackay, who said, "Psychology has unveiled the dismal and sinister depths in human nature. Man can no longer flee from reality into the romantic refuge of his own heart; for the human heart has become a house of horrors in whose murky recesses man cannot erect for his solace either a shrine or a citadel. Man is bad; he is a sinner."

God did not change His mind (v. 6), but man by his sin moved himself out of the circle of God's love over into the circle of His judgment. God never changes, but we change our relation to Him by our actions. Such is the evident meaning of this verse.

II. Deliverance for the Upright (8:1, 4, 18).

God remembered Noah, and he "found grace in the eyes of the Lord" (Gen. 6:8) because he was "a just man" (6:9). At the Lord's command, he prepared the ark for the saving of himself and his house, and after the Lord had "shut him in" (Gen. 7:16), the great judgment by water came upon the earth.

After 150 days (Gen. 7:24), the Lord remembered Noah (8:1) and caused the earth to dry up once again. The same Lord who shut him in to keep him during the flood brought him out after the flood (8:15, 16), gave him great power (9:1-4), assured him of His protection (9:5-7), and gave him the great promise (9:8-16) of which the rainbow became the token.

The God who will in no wise forget the sin of the wicked will never leave nor forsake those who walk uprightly before Him. The story of Noah should stimulate our faith, causing us to obey and trust God. His protecting hand is over His children, and He can bring them through the darkest days of tribulation.

III. Mercy in the Midst of Sin (8:20-22).

"Noah built an altar," for the first impulse of his heart was to give praise to God for His mighty deliverance. His offering came up to God as "a sweet savor," that is, it was pleasing to God.

To come before God with acceptable worship, man must come with clean hands. The question is not whether he is brilliant, learned, or of high position. The one thing that counts is obedience. When such a man offers the worship of his heart before God, it goes up to him like a sweet savor.

God knew man's heart (v. 21). He had no illusions that even the judgment of the flood would change it. Eagerly His love sought man's obedient response, but He well knew that the awful pestilence of sin would continue until the very end of the age.

So in spite of that sin, and in the very midst of it, God promised that He would never again wipe out humanity as He did in the flood. There would be individual judgment and collective judgment on certain groups, but never again the smiting of every living thing. Thus, He set men free from the terror which must have now been in their hearts.

The beautiful rainbow in the cloud became a token of God's promise, and the visible assurance to "all flesh" that the judgment of the flood would not be repeated. Never again would seed time and harvest, nor any of the orderly processes of nature, fail throughout the whole earth.

What a gracious God we have! And what a pity that men presume upon His goodness.

SERVICEMEN'S LETTERS

May 17, 1945

Citizens Service Comm.

Dear Friends: I thank you very much for the Easter card and Air mail stationery. It seems that whenever I begin wondering how soon and where I am going to get my writing supplies you fill my needs, you cannot realize how much I appreciate that item as it is by far one of the rarest to obtain.

I am feeling quite well and am much more satisfied with life in the Philippines than at any other place I have been in the Pacific. A few places in New Guinea that I have been in are Milne Bay, Oro Bay, Suputa, Buna, Aitape and Hollandia here as well. I've traveled about a great deal, but the most notable place was Manila. I have visited that place a number of times, first was shortly after its recapture by our forces. The Japs were very thorough in their destruction of the business section. In one of my recent visits I found most of the debris cleared away and business in operation, prices are out of this world. I paid one peso for a slice of pie and two pesos for a ten cent dip of ice cream. A peso is equivalent to fifty cents U. S. money.

I found in operation in Manila a large modern air-conditioned theater in tact and operating, for the first time since I left the states. I sat back in a comfortable chair, relaxed in a cool theater and enjoyed a picture. There is no comparison between this and the G. I. version of it. I could rave on madly about this and other things I've found and had not known that I had lost. Yes we are, after a year in New Guinea and Netherlands East Indies jungles, back to civilization.

Once more after not getting the Tinley Park Times for about four months, it is catching up with me. In the past year I have had seven changes of address and each time I wrote to Mr. Semmler telling him of it. I guess he has never received any of them as he still is using my first overseas address. Perhaps you can tell him of my present address so that his records will be up to date. I shall appreciate it very much.

As ever, Frank Wright

I received your thoughtful gift, stationery is something I can always use out here and now I want to thank you for it.

I am still in Burma, enjoying the hot days and the rainy nights. It gets so hot out here during the day you just about could fry eggs in your mess kits.

We just moved back for a rest after spending some time with Mors Tosh force and those boys are plenty tough, in one week I put more miles on my feet than I would even think of putting on my car.

From some of the news clippings I received from home it looks like Tinley Park will stay on the map, that new depot must really be something when it makes the Chicago papers. I wish I could be there to see the dedication. I guess there will be a lot of people out for that, from some of the letters I received from home that air show was quite a thing too.

I am a little behind in some of the news of Tinley for I haven't received the Tinley Times ever since I left the States. If any way possible I would like to get the paper.

The Presidents death brought sorrow to most of the boys out here. I guess all over the world they had services for our late President, let's hope our new President will bring victory soon.

Well I guess this will have to be all for now and I want to thank the Citizen Service Committee for the good work they are doing and I hope

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
The subject of the Lesson-Sermon, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 1, was:

"CHRISTIAN SCIENCE"
The Golden Text was:

"Lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed" (Heb. 12: 12, 13).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"I will stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower, and will watch to see what he will say unto me, and what I shall answer when I am reproved. And the Lord answered me, and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may read that which is written. For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry" (Hab. 2: 1-3).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"In the year 1866, I discovered the Christ Science or divine laws of Life, Truth, and Love, and named my discovery Christian Science. . . . This apostolical Principle points to the revelation of Immanuel, 'God with us,'—the sovereign ever-presence, delivering the children of men from every ill 'that flesh is heir to.' . . . I knew the Principle of all harmonious Mind-action to be God, and that cures were produced in primitive Christian healing by holy, uplifting faith; But I must know the Science of this healing, and I won my way to absolute conclusions through divine revelation, reason, and demonstration" (pp. 107, 109).

A LAYMAN'S RESPONSIBILITY

The Laymen's National Committee of New York, founders and sponsors of National Bible Week, was held recently, instituted National Sunday School Week. The sole purpose was to stimulate Sunday School attendance and support.

Admiral Reginald R. Belknap, Chairman of the Committee, says: "It is time to popularize the fact that a boy or girl who attends Sunday School, who is obedient to his parents and his teachers, is not a 'sissy', but a real American. National Sunday School Week will endeavor to get over that every parents is not only derelict in his duties, but he cannot expect to enjoy the respect, admiration, or even the company of his friends and associates, if he does not make some effort, some sacrifice to insure his children a knowledge of God. America was founded on man's consciousness of God, man's daily labor, and the fruits therefrom. Until there is again a universal recognition of the importance of assuring American children a knowledge of God, the very principles that served to create this country of ours, will continue to be in jeopardy."

Concerted action should be instituted to popularize Sunday School attendance, to give the youth of the nation a stabilizing influence to counteract the irresponsible thinking that inevitably follows war. The fact that strength of character develops with a better understanding of the relative importance of the spiritual and the material, is evidenced by the experiences of the boys on the fighting fronts. The same stabilizing influence must be encouraged in our domestic life.

"Sure I can be a Nurse's Aid

THANKS TO MY
AUTOMATIC RANGE"

"How can I be a Volunteer Nurse's Aid two days a week and still cook for my family? Why, my modern range takes care of that.

"I prepare the food in the morning, slip the complete meal into the oven and I'm on my way.

"While I'm busy at the hospital, the automatic timer turns on the oven . . . and when I, and the rest of the family get home, a delicious dinner is cooked to perfection, ready to serve.

"Believe me, I'm glad we have a modern range. It's fast-cooking and marvelously clean. Another thing—it never heats up the kitchen in the summertime, either.

"I think the modern Range is the last word in modern cooking."

"I never did believe in standing over a hot stove all afternoon. Even before I decided to be a Nurse's Aid, I took advantage of the automatic feature of my range. It's simple as ABC. So, if you have an automatic range, make the most of it."

From somewhere in Germany comes this letter from Pfc. William Morrison to his mother, Mrs. Ruth Morrison, dated June 1:

Dear Mom:

Here I am away south of Magdeburg. I'm about 25 miles from Czech border near the German town of Plauen. It is very pretty here. mountains, forests and lakes.

We should have a nice time if they don't work us too hard. I got that film and a good camera to use it in. So I should be getting some nice pictures. We had venison for supper to-night, it is very good. We got three deer yesterday. I should have more time to write here. I didn't have any time at Gross Otterleben. I was busy from 7:30 till some times 3 in the morning. I had charge of the military government office when the officer wasn't there. He was there only 4 hours a day. The town has a population of 20,000 with about 700 displaced Russians and Poles and they really gave us a hard time, stealing and shooting Germans. I'm glad to be rid of that job. So long for now, Love as ever Bill.

Cpl. George Hentsch and Pvt. Gordon Spiess of Mokena, Tell Of Their Thrilling Experiences

Another Mokena man has returned from the ETOW and has gladdened the hearts of his home folks and friends. He is none other than T. Cpl. George Hentsch, age 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hentsch.

Cpl. Hentsch entered the service October 6, 1942 and after having had two years of training in this country he sailed in Sept. 1944 on the Empress of Australia and landed at Liverpool, England, taking 14 days to cross the Atlantic. They entrained the same evening and were taken to Camp Penning, England where they joined Co. C 174th Armored Infantry of Gen. Patch's 7th Army. They had two months more of training. At the end of that period they entrained again, going to Southampton, England where they sailed for LaHarve, France landing there November 1944. They at once started on about a 100 mile trip going by half tracks, George being a driver, and each driver having an assistant. They went to a camp about 50 miles east of Rouen, France where they lived in old ruined buildings, repairing them as best they could where it was necessary for a little comfort. They stayed there for three weeks until the complete supply of equipment was assembled, then again drove by half tracks, 350 miles to Luneville, France. Here their 3rd battalion lived in a school a few days. Soon they pressed on and shortly met the enemy and their first combat near Bitch, France at the Maginot Line and as the Germans had pulled out they did not meet much resistance here. They pressed on for nine days and nights, living on C and K rations, being reinforced by the 36th division of the 7th Army and now encountering enemy resistance. They were relieved for a well earned week rest when they again entered action, which took them to Bischwiller, Germany at the Rhine.

They fought here for four days, losing many lives. This was the same time as the great battle of the bulge in Belgium by Gen. Patton's army, and in which part of the 7th Army was assisting.

The division which Cpl. Hentsch was with after these four days of fighting withdrew for replacements and for a much needed rest. Winter snow was on the ground and George's duty as driver of a half track, was to carry ammunition, men etc. to the fighting front under enemy fire.

They next went into the Colmar pocket for two weeks in the southern part of France, then up to the northern part of France joining Gen. Patton's army, helping it with the bulge, and finally crossing the Rhine, on pontoon bridge, near Mannheim, Germany. Here they battled for six days and nights and it was at this time and place that the half track which George was driving was hit by a Bazooka gun which was presumably fired from a fox hole.

When the half track was hit George had nine men on it taking them to the front. The vehicle burst into flames, George was knocked out but he came to, in a few minutes and in order to save his life, jumped thru the flames, burning his face and hands very badly. Four of these men got out. George crawled under heavy enemy fire for quite a distance, then in company with others, walked 2 1/2 miles back to the Medics. They sent him on to the evacuation hospital for further treatment. In a few days he flew to Bristol, England to the 112th General hospital where he remained for 1 1/2 months. Here he was on VE day. He did not seem to care to enter into much mirth activity but did attend a small party in the Red Cross room as a celebration.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Spiess, daughter Elaine and Grandpa Schmuhl were overjoyed a week ago Sunday when their son Pvt. Gordon Spiess, who has been overseas, arrived home unexpectedly. He looks fine and in an interview with this paper says it is wonderful to be home, and to have the good old home cooked food.

Gordon who was so anxious to get into the Service, was inducted shortly after his 18th birthday last year. He received four months training at Camp Robinson, Arkansas with the infantry.

On January 6, 1945 he sailed on the Queen Elizabeth with 18,000 other American boys and landed six days later in Scotland. There he was chosen with 400 other men to go to Weymouth, England leaving the same day as landing. Arriving at Weymouth, this group was taken to a LCI boat. (Landing Craft Infantry) and remained in port for two days, when they sailed again for LaHarve, France.

Arriving at LaHarve, they immediately entrained for Epinal, France which is a nice city in the southern part of the country. Spending one day in this city, they were taken by trucks to a large wood, where they joined the 3rd division of Gen. Patch's 7th army. While in this wood, they lived in large underground rooms, which had been previously built by the Germans as foxholes. They spent one day here, meeting their new buddies and leaders. Their food here was of the ration variety.

The next day, with three feet of snow on the ground and roads, they marched one mile to the battle front where they met the enemy and entered into hostilities. This lasted for six days, pushing the enemy constantly ahead of them. During this time, they were four days without food. Water was obtained from French Wells. On the 7th day they were allowed time for a rest period, being relieved by re-enforcements. After the much needed rest they again joined their group and pressed forward against the enemy which brought Gordon and his buddies 15 miles in to Germany, near Bozenheim. To do this they had to wade across the river Rhine, waist deep and it was two days before their clothing was dry, drying on them of course and it was cold winter weather. After a few more days of fierce fighting, they again had a rest period going back into France. Ending the rest, they entrained for a gathering place in a wood and lived for another day in fox holes, and then again shoved off again, their objective this time, being Oberstrum, Germany at the Siegfried Line. It was here at 3:30 in the morning on the 15th of March, during fierce fighting, that an 88 mm. tank gun hit into the group of six men of which Gordon was one, hitting them, throwing Gordon 150 feet thru the air and knocking him out. He was badly hit with shrapnel in his head and both arms. When he came to, he got up and walked back to see if he could find his buddies and finding four of them had been killed by the same shot. He located another boy who had an injury to his foot and he helped Gordon walk back 2 1/2 miles to their battalion aid station where they were taken by ambulance to an evacuation hospital in France, where he received first aid treatment and remained two days. He was then taken by train to Merceourt, France to the 21st general hospital where he stayed three weeks, then flown to Swindon, England to the 186th general hospital. He underwent two operations for the removal of shrapnel, his arm being stiff and part of the cords being removed, but it is much better and he can move it to some degree, we are glad to say, and hope in time he will have good use of his arm again.

It was a happy day when George sailed on the Golthol, for home. It was Friday, May 18, 1945 when the Golthol left South Hampton, England and landed in New York on May 29 and George again saw the good old USA. He arrived home in Mokena June 2 and left this past Saturday evening for the Percy Jones hospital at Battle Creek, Mich., after a 21 day furlough.

Cpl. Hentsch wears the 12th Armored Patch, the French Combat patch, ETOW ribbon, with two stars the Purple Heart and the Good Conduct Ribbon. He brought home a German pistol and field glass, a silver spoon and german paper money. He had other souvenirs, but they were burned with the half track.

We were glad to have Cpl. Hentsch sign our News-Bulletin Servicemen register and hope all the other Servicemen will do the same.

Gordon left the 186th hospital May 23 and arrived in this country June 13, after an 18 day voyage. The boat took the southern route.

Gordon, who is now 19 years old, wears the 3rd division Patch, the French Combat patch; the Combat Infantry Badge of the European Theater of Operations, with two battle stars, the Purple Heart and the much coveted Presidential Unit Citation. The latter he earned by voluntarily guiding a group of soldiers safely over a mine field. In all he was in combat two months. Gordon will return July 17 to the Percy Jones hospital at Battle Creek, Mich.

We were very glad to have Gordon sign this paper's register book.

HOLDING A SECURE SHARE

Years ago an American, an English man and a German, visiting an Oriental country, were granted an audience by the local potentate. Addressing the Englishman, he said, "I understand that you are a subject of the King of England." The English man bowed and replied, "Yes, your Highness, and I am very proud of it." Turning to the German, he said, "And you are a subject of the Kaiser." Clicking his heels and bowing stiffly, the German replied, "Yes, your Highness, and very proud!" Addressing the American, his Highness said, "And you are a subject of the United States of America." Whereupon the American exclaimed, "Subject, hell! I own part of the United States of America."

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3
by 2nd Lt. Erlene Conel

Last Friday afternoon, from the Rubinkam Airport Flight office, I watched admiringly as a sleek silver plane, that looked like a "baby airplane" came in for a "hot" (high speed) smooth as silk landing. Later, it was my pleasure to meet, and talk to the pilot, "Doc" Watson of Dallas. This modern, charming Texan, who has the unlimited skyways to gallop "range" and 450 Horsepower to gallop him over it, told me things that I consider a peek into the future. And, it certainly looks "Roger" for the young folks who are planning and working now to make aviation a career.

I was invited to inspect the plane, a beautiful Spartan Executive. Its 450 Horsepowered engine gives a cruising speed of 165 MPH. Fully equipped for instrument flying, it can carry five passengers comfortably and luxuriously, through almost every kind of weather. Pilot Watson's eyes sparkled a bit as he told of his flight North. He was rightly proud of the performance of the plane, modestly so of his own. Here's the itinerary and the time for each "leg of the trip": Dallas to New Orleans, two hours and fifty five minutes. New Orleans to Jackson, Miss. one hour and ten minutes. Jackson to Evansville, two hours and ten minutes. And Evansville to Rubinkam, one hour and thirty minutes.

"Doc" Watson, a former flight instructor with hundreds of flying hours to his credit, pilots the plane for the Barron, Kidd and A. W. Cherry Co., who have found air transportation a great help in their oil drilling and contracting business. As we talked, this plane became a symbol of things to come, of the many companies who soon, like this pioneering company, will speed up, increase their scope of operations, and efficiency, by making business calls in person by air transportation. TO BREAK the news abruptly, his name is Paul Derringer, born in Springfield, Ky., some 37 years ago. Big Paul, 6 feet 3½ inches in height, displacement 215 pounds, has always been one of my favorite pitchers.

Paul Derringer

In 1931, after knocking around with Danville and Rochester, Big Paul won 18 games for the Cardinals against 8 losses—and then took a heavy dip in 1932.

The Kentucky Rifleman was a complete dud in 1933 when he won 7 games and lost 27 games for St. Louis and Cincinnati. That year Paul couldn't dent the surface of a custard pie. He wasn't much better a year later, in 1934. After that he stumbled along for a while. But he had big years in 1938, 1939 and 1940. And then again he began skidding a trifle, largely through early season injuries.

Just a year ago Paul won 12 and lost 16 games with the Reds—only so-so. Not so hot for Paul—although he was no longer any kid. "In my opinion," Bill Dickey once told me, "Derringer is one of the best pitchers I ever tried to hit. He has more than his share of speed—he has a fine curve ball—and he has control. I can't understand why Derringer doesn't win around 22 or even 25 games a year. I can tell you he's that good. He's one of the few pitchers I never liked to face."

In any event, Paul Derringer began his 18th pro season at the age of 37 with four successive wins over the Cardinals and the Pirates, picked as the two strongest clubs in the National League.

Pitching for the Cubs, Derringer may be an upsetting factor in the National League race. For the Cubs have shown the league better pitching than any one looked for. Charlie Grimm has gotten them away at what you might call spring pennant speed, where a year ago at this time they were deep down in the quicksands, out of sight at the bottom.

It might be mentioned here that Derringer is on a par with Bill Dickey as a field shot—and a better deer shot—around the Florida Everglades. My guess would be that Derringer is close to being the best pitcher in either league, on a par with Mort Cooper and Bucky Walters.

Stirnweiss and Lindell

We ran into what you might call a representative gathering of baseball people a few days ago, including veteran baseball writers, managers and old-time ball players. Someone started talking about the best baseball player in the American League today. George Stirnweiss, the Yankee second baseman, drew a unanimous vote for this spot.

As Harry Salsinger put it: "Stirnweiss would have been a star in pre-war days. He will still be a star in postwar play. The Yankee infielder is a strong hitter, a fine infielder and a great base-runner. He is fast and smart. An all-around athlete, well up on the competitive side."

In the opinion roundup that followed, Boudreau of Cleveland and Stephens of the Browns were placed close to the Yankee entry for all-around ability.

This is no news to Joe McCarthy. McCarthy was keen about his crack infielder back in his rookie days.

"You'll hear a lot more about this fellow," he said a year ago after the first few days of spring training. "He can do about all you could ask from an infielder where all he needs is a little more experience."

Stirnweiss joins the combination of baseball and football stars. He was one of the best backs North Carolina ever had, a chunky bullet.

McCarthy has never been any too hilarious about football players. Joe claims they get too many shoulder, ankle and knee bruises or injuries that often return as haunting ghosts of former gridiron glory. Yet Stirnweiss and Spud Chandler, two of his best men, were both football stars. So was Johnny Lindell in high school, which Johnny proved in putting that famous block on Kurowski in the 1943 world series.

Lindell is another winning type whose absence would make more than a small difference in the present race which may be just as steamy as the one last season that moved on to the final pitch. Lindell himself believes the Yankees' all-around power and pitching will carry them through this time, whether he is with them or not.

Speed Comes First

Recently I asked Carl Hubbell, now a Giant scout, what he considered first in selecting pitchers.

"First of all," Hubbell said, "a pitcher must have speed. He must have an arm that can slip that fast one by you. If he has speed, you can probably teach him a curve ball and control later on. If he lacks speed he has almost no chance. Here and there you'll get a slow-ball pitcher who can get by. But not one in a hundred can turn the trick."

Agriculture In the News

Onions

Next to salt, the world's most valuable seasoning is the onion. It has come to be recognized as a leading garden "must."

Alexander found the onion in Egypt. He fed it to his troops in Greece in the belief that it excited martial ardor.

Seed Onions A new hybrid has been produced in California which yields 38 tons to the acre.

In 1597, John Gerard reported that onions were good against the biting of a mad dog, for colds, biles, to grow hair, for burns, or gun wounds. He also said it caused headaches, weakened the eyes, dulled the senses and provoked oversleep.

The volatile oil of onion has been found by Russian scientists to contain a bacteria-killing substance. Onion paste is being used in Russia to heal wounds and guard against infections.

Dehydrated onions have proven a most important item for overseas shipping. French fried onions promise to become more popular as the supply of odorless onions becomes larger.

Feed Needed by Cows

In planning the dairy cows requirement, two tons of good quality legume or mixed legume hay should be harvested per cow, or one ton of good quality legume hay or mixed legume roughage, and three tons of silage per cow.

Twenty bushels of corn and 20 bushels of oats should be harvested for each cow. In addition five bushels of soybeans, when silage is provided, or 2½ bushels where silage is not available.

A Bit of Earth

By LILLIAN AUSTIN

McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Features.

LILLY BELL waited while Mr. Davis checked the books. Then he counted out a fat roll of bills and placed them before her, watching as she wrapped the bundle carefully in a clean handkerchief. "Aren't you going to count it?" he asked.

"No, sir. You are credit us for a year and trust' us to stay till the crop's made."

"But you don't realize how much you have there."

"Yes, sir, I know it's a heap of money, but we've got ten chillun and eight in-laws and twicet as many grandbabies and some of 'em need it 'fore nex' year."

"Why should you give it to them?" Mr. Davis asked. "They didn't help make the crop. They're grown men and women, and if they can't make a living for themselves, what'll they do when you and Sam need help? How would you and Sam like to own your own home?"

"You mean us could have a shack and a bit of ground that really belong to us?"

"You've been here a year now and we'll make you the same proposition we do others we want to keep on the place. We'll sell you the land and you can make annual payments with your surplus and each season your share of the crop will increase according to the amount paid up."

"I ain't understan' all them words, Mr. Davis, but if it gonna get us somethin' for our old days, us is do it. But I's sho' in for some argu-tyin'."

"Of course we can't make a deal unless Sam is willing."

"Tain't Sam gonna give me trouble. He be proud as a banty rooster, does us own any foot of earth."

Lilly Bell planned as she walked home. No more moving for them; she and Sam were landowners! She thought of her pretty white curtains she could use now when they fixed that broken window, and the best bedspread and that old linoleum rug Mrs. Davis had given her. It could be fitted to the kitchen floor and left there till it wore out. There'd be flower beds and red roses blooming most of the year and a winter garden of hardy vegetables they wouldn't have to leave for the next tenant.

When Sam came up from the barn she turned to watch his face. "How'd you like to own this place?" she asked. "Us can buy on time," she went on. "And Mr. Davis is gonna stop by in the mornin' for us to sign the papers, does you want it?"

Sam got out the new glass Mr. Davis had sent weeks ago for the window. "Cain't you take time to eat you supper," she grumbled, secretly pleased at Sam's impatience. "Here come Sally," she told him. "I guess she done hear us is settle up and she want to know how long her man can look for a job this winter 'fore he fin' one to suit."

She laid plates for Sally and her little ones. "Go on, set up, gal," she urged, "and quit you studyin' somethin' don't cern you. Us is get the money and spend it a'ready."

Sally didn't believe it. "Mama, you ain't buy nothin' but a cotton dress for you'self and a box of 'bac-cy for Papa."

"Us is buy prop'ty," Lilly Bell informed her importantly. "We owns this house and every stick and stone of the land we's been croppin'."

"How you gonna pay it off?" Sally asked. "Papa's a old man a'ready."

"Ain't it the truf," Lilly Bell agreed. "He too old to s'port his young 'uns and from now on us is look out for ourse'fs. Mr. Davis is got the money and tomorrow us is sign up."

"You give up Papa's hard-earned money and you ain't got a writin' or nothin' to show for it?" Sally asked scathingly.

"Now, Sally, Davis' word is good 'nuff for anybody, and—"

"Tain't for me," Sally interrupted angrily. "It's gonna tell Bill and Annie and us go see Mr. Davis, and—"

Sam jerked his chair back and stood up. "Get out!" he told the girl, "till you is 'member you' manners and talk 'spectful to you' Mama. And the hull lot of you keep out of our business, and if you ain't like what us do, stay out of our house till you is like it!"

Sally was gone and the supper untouched and Lilly Bell sat stunned by Sam's sudden show of temper. "Eat you' supper, honey, and don't worry," Sam coaxed. "Them chillun ain't turn 'gin us jes' cause they can't boss us." He grinned at her. "I weren't mad at Sally. I's jes' scared they's gonna git that money 'fore us sign the paper."

"They can't git it offen Mr. Davis," Lilly Bell said, "cause he ain't got it. But I ain't tellin' the chillun that. Tain't good business to hand it over till the deal's made."

"Doggone, I didn't know that!" Sam exclaimed, looking at her with new respect.

Lilly Bell smiled happily. Why should she admit she hadn't known it either until Mr. Davis told her?

Cholera Outbreaks

Cholera outbreaks have shown a gradual increase over the United States during the last five years, and over 5,200 outbreaks of the disease were officially reported last year, not counting numerous smaller local outbreaks.

Little Known Stories About Well Known People

Inept military censorship has appalled many newspaper men. However, we believe there would be less quibbling between reporters and brass hat blue-pencillers if they would use the following yarn as their guide: Some years ago, an army ammunition depot exploded on the outskirts of Baltimore. But the colonel in charge of the depot refused to give reporters any information. They promptly appealed to the general commanding the corps area, who picked them up in his car and conveyed the newsboys to the scene of the disaster. . . . They were greeted at the gate by the colonel, who stated: "General, I have just thrown some reporters out of here." . . . The general replied: "Colonel, let me present these gentlemen to you. They represent the local newspapers. I've discovered that it is better to give them the news right away. They'll probably dig up the information, anyhow, but a little co-operation saves them time and helps the army." . . . The general's name? Douglas MacArthur.

When heavyweight champ Joe Louis was a youngster his mother took him to Detroit's child guidance bureau. The psychologist there studied his case. His amazing counsel is still a part of the bureau's files: "Teach him to do something with his hands."

Anyone who has waded through the labyrinth of Bretton Woods or studied the intricacies of reconversion is aware economics is a complex subject. . . . Will Rogers once listened to a discussion by a group of expert economists. One of them asked Rogers: "What is your opinion about rigid economy?" . . . Will intoned: "The only thing I know about rigid economy is that it is a dead Scotchman."

Lowell Thomas tells this: One evening in May, 1919, when Franklin D. Roosevelt and his wife were driving home, a concussion followed by a terrific explosion tore the air. Turning into their own street, they found themselves in total darkness, driving over broken glass. Every street lamp was blown away, the trees stripped of their leaves. At home they found the front door blown open, and every window shattered. The lower floor was chaos. . . . FDR dashed upstairs shouting, "Johnny, Johnny." Johnny was sleepy and confused by the uproar. He wanted to know what the trouble was. "Turn over and go to sleep," Mrs. Roosevelt said firmly and calmly. "It's just a little bomb!" . . . Ever since then, at moments of extreme excitement or uproar in the Roosevelt household, when a measure of sang-froid is called for, somebody quotes that priceless remark: "It's just a little bomb!"

Teddy Roosevelt informed a biographer that he learned a great lesson in the art of diplomacy from an Indian chief. . . . While touring the west, Teddy met an Indian who had six wives. . . . Roosevelt suggested that he choose one and discard the other five. . . . After thoughtful consideration, the chieftain agreed—on one condition. "You choose the one for me to keep," he replied, "and then you tell the other five."

France's great statesman, Clemenceau, demanded drastic punishment for Germany's war criminals after the last war, but he was overruled by his diplomatic colleagues. . . . One diplomat informed Clemenceau: "Your demand to kill so many Germans is murder." . . . The French statesman looked him straight in the eye and snapped: "Killing microbes is also a form of murder. But they must be killed in order to cure a disease!"

The OWI continues to be jabbed by flappers who deprecate the importance of propaganda in the current struggle. But the use of propaganda as a weapon of war isn't new. Napoleon was as wily a propagandist as he was a militarist. . . . During the war in Spain, Bonaparte's official editor penned this communique: "The emperor with forces much inferior to the enemy inflicted a decisive defeat on him." . . . In the margin Napoleon wrote: "Idiot! I need no glory. I have more than I want already. But I need the enemy to think I have soldiers when I have not." . . . Striking out the references to his inferior forces, he wrote: "At the head of forces far superior to those of the enemy, the emperor gained a brilliant victory."

You could fill a library with G. B. Shaw squelches. But there have been times when the genius-with-the-long-white-beard has been the victim of a rapier retort. . . . Shaw abhors dinner parties. One time Lady Randolph Churchill invited him to come to one of them. Shaw wired: "I will not come to your dinner party. Why should I break my well known habits?" . . . Lady Churchill swiftly wired her reply: "Know nothing about your habits but trust they are not as bad as your manners."

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

The new government tire industry expansion program is geared to produce an additional 21,300 military tires a day, or 6,000,000 more a year.

Foam rubber is expected to replace familiar upholstery construction in automobile seats, saving nearly a foot in the length of the body.

Rubber springs already in use experimentally for automobile springs, and in actual operation on street cars, may speed all wheel transportation and greatly increase riding comfort.

Navy Holystones

In the navy, holystones were, until recently, used to scrub and clean wooden decks. But the term goes far back into the antiquity of naval lore. The stones were originally so named because fragments of broken monuments from Saint Nicholas church, Great Yarmouth, England, were used to scrub the decks of the ships of the British navy.

In the British service they were also known as "ecclesiastical bricks."

Frown on Drafting More Railroad Men In Army

Although the armed services have been "looking hungrily" at some 150,000 physically husky railroaders "who would be excellent soldier recruits", Brigadier Gen. Leonard P. Ayres, economic advisor to the Chesapeake and Ohio Lines, is sanguine that the final decision of the draft authorities will be against taking many more men from the already greatly diminished ranks of railroad workers.

In an article in a recent issue of TRACKS, employe magazine of the C & O lines, Gen. Ayres, who has had discussions with persons in Washington dealing with manpower problems, says that the armed services have already taken 280,000 railroad employees, and that the roads are undermanned now to the extent of 100,000 men. The work that railroaders perform "is more nearly essential than any other civilian or military tasks to which they might be assigned", he adds.
